The Dutch Association of Psychologists (Nederlands Instituut van Psychologen, NIP) is the largest professional association for psychologists in the Netherlands, representing more than 13,000 members: a dynamic group that advocates for psychologists at all levels in the psychological sector and in government. They are constantly promoting the contributions psychology makes to people's health and wellbeing, and to understanding important social issues facing Dutch society. The NIP is well positioned to seize opportunities that will benefit NIP psychologists and the science and profession of psychology.

The language used at the NIP is Dutch, although they aim to translate the most important information in English as well for non-Dutch speaking members.

General objectives

- to promote psychology in the Netherlands and in Europe
- to serve psychologists' professional and social interests
- to provide members with a platform for the exchange of knowledge and experience
- to raise standards of training and practice in psychology

The NIP strives to optimize the quality of psychologists' professional activities in various ways.

The association is administered by professional psychologists from a diverse range of areas and specializations. All of whom are actively involved in the NIP and its policy development.

The NIP is divided into 18 sections, each with its own executive committee. Each section represents different fields of activity. If you become a member of the NIP you can join various sections.
