The Spanish Society for Bio and Neurofeedback (SEBINE) is the result of a collaborative effort of different entities and distinguished professionals in the world of bio and neurofeedback in Spain. SEBINE was born from the first neurofeedback and biofeedback association created in Spain. The main goal of the Society is the standardization and homologation of Bio and Neurofeedback as therapeutic tools. The empirical evidence, the research and continuous education plus high quality standards represents the foundation guidelines of their work.

Internationally, SEBINE collaborates with different institutions for the dissemination among members and public in general of the knowledge and state of research in applied neuroscience. Besides being an institutional affiliate of ISNR, SEBINE collaborates closely with associations such as the Biofeedback Foundation of Europe (BFE) and the Biofeedback Certificate International Alliance (BCIA). BCIA-Spain was established as a BCIA affiliate providing support to health practitioners to obtain their certification in Bio and Neurofeedback in Spain.

Through its webpage, SEBINE offers information, communication and cooperation among their members promoting a scientific collaboration with the rest of the world and as such, is continuously updating, open to debate and to the contribution of knowledge from professionals interested in Biofeedback and Neurofeedback in general.
